BEGAN WELL, BUT ENDED IN SLUMP

Current of Liquidation Became Precipitate After Appearance of Bank Statement.

NO DEMAND AFTER OPENING

Preparations Being Made for Remittances on Japanese Loan Subscription.

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, May 20.--To-day's stock market started rather hopefully, but before the end of the two hours' session depression had closed in again and the closing was weak at considerable net losses throughout. Opening orders to buy for processional traders, who had sold closing was weak at considerable closes throughout. Opening orders to buy for processional traders, who had sold the market short yesterday, were effective in lifting prices, advances running to a point or more in many of the prominent market leaders. There was no effective demand following this opening advance and by the end of the first nour liquidation sale legan to dribble upon the market. The current increased in force and after the appearance of the bank statement became sowewhat precipitate. The bank showing formed practically the only litem of news which was of influence the reserve of $4.735.00 proved somewhat less than the trading. The shrirkage in the creating of the case of $4.735.00 proved somewhat less than the refininary estimates. At milling exchange made a further advance to 44.735.00 proved somewhat less than the refered upon the loan flow who was expanded upwards of $20.00,000.

Stering exchange made for the remit ances on the Japanose loan sub-cription. I is not believed by banking authorities that these r mittaness can be considered without a large export of cold unless the rates for more here should rise to a level to offer an altraction for the leaving of the process of the loan in New York for it is great age of more year the large and the progress of the loan in New York for it is great age of more year in the progress of the loan in New York for it is great age of more year in the progress of the loan in New York for it is great age of more year in the progress of the loan in New York for it is great age of more year in the progress of the loan in New York for it is great age of more year in the progress of the loan in New York for it is great age of more year in the progress of the loan in New York for it is in the more year and Husen the progress and in a cuttour shirl in the demand for merchandles, overing to the backward seems on a cautiour shirl in the demand for future requirements. The receipts the just week were about the same as the weakenow was fairly good, with a small proportion of fine test and wrapp ra being effects. Private On all section were about as

The continued rain of the past week has prevented the farmers from during much work on their farms, theref re they are rather backward in getting their land prepared for pianting tobacco. Plants are pientiful and in good condition. A few have planted small portions of their crop. With favorable weather indications the crop will be planted in good time.

Danville. Va., May 20, 105.

We have had fair sales this week with ab ut
an equal proportion of wagon and silvied

in the quality of the offerings, except in re
was rather a larger quantity of tobacco office d
in had order. Such tobaccos were, of co.-re, neglected, but prices on everything else are alout as they have been for several weeks

Since our last report the weather has been exceptionally fine for planting, and the crip is being rapidly pitched. From the best infofair per cent. of the ctop has been past du this section. Very little trading has been done in old tobaccos this week.

Norfolk Peanut Market.

Norfolk Peanut Market.

Norfolk, V.A., May 20.—The peanut market has lost its duliness here. It is not brisk because there is not enough farmers stock coming to the market to test the quality of the market. There is nothing to show speed about. But when a lot of 700 bags came he of one day this week they were taken by the first sealer to whom they were affected at the full price. There are so few peanuis for sale, however, that one dealer declared that he doubted if 2,000 bags of handpecked peanuis could be found for sale in the city at any price within reason. Yet at this time of the average you hear greater in the sale in the city at any price within reason. Yet at this time of the average you there are generally may thousand boars of the best grade to be had at a lower price than they would bring now. He said also that he price was sarried too high for the last its cop. The cleaners did not have a lower price than the fall, and they day trade at all. He doubted the sale of worn, or at least is giving styles vogue, in England just as well as in America. The short skirt has been widely adopted for walking, and the English woman has at last learned how to wear it gracefully. So popular has it become, indeed, that I have recently seen at the Carlton several English women wearing evening dress with the skirt somewhat abbreviated. But great as are all these reforms, all would have been without effect had not the English woman after much healtain resolved to alter her figure.

"The new straight front and the habit back," which Raymond Hitchook, sings about, were regarded with extreme disfavor when they first made their appearance here. The English woman positively refused to forsake the corset of her ancestors, which, to judge from the result obtained from its use, must have often been little better than a piece of string ited around the waist. Time and example have, however, worked wonders. The women one sees nowadays no longer carry themselves with a drooping, listleys air. They move along a crily, their carriage in many cases is superb, and their conversation is animated. As a class, English women seem to smile more, and there is no prettier sight than to see them in Hyde Park on a Sunday morning after church, or in the shopping streets on week days.

The American woman who, when leaving Parls this year for London, packs up all her smartest frocks, except an evening dress or two, reasoning with herself that anything will do for London, will find when she reaches here that she has made a sad mistake.
